THE CHINA MAIL.

hongkong, thursday, march 21, 1878

THE telegrams we publish to-day are more peaceful in tone, inasmuch as they point to the possibility of Russia submitting the entire peace conditions to a Congress, and of that proposed body meeting after all. The fact is, we have not received any authoritative announcement that Russia will not comply with this demand. All that we have been informed on the point is that "it is semiofficially stated at St. Petersburg that Russia cannot submit the peace conditions to a Congress." Three days later we were told that "there are now doubts as to whether the proposed European Congress will meet," and that an Athens journal had stated that "Russia has refused the proposal of England that Greece should be admitted to the Con-These are the only references that have been made in regard to the Conference since the announcement that both Austria and England insisted upon the whole of the peace conditions being submitted to it, although no doubt the warlike nature of the advices in other respects during the last few days tend to corroborate the doubts expressed as to the meeting of the Congress. To-day's telegram shows pretty clearly that this about the end of March. gathering of the representatives of the great Powers, in which lies the main, if at Bojukders, but it is understood that the not the only hope, of peace, rests almost Porte objects to this, entirely upon the attitude of Russia. If the Caar poses too much upon his "bridge of honour" and his right ofexacting his own conditions from Turkey without reference to the interests of other Powers, there will be no Conference but probably a war; if, on the other hand, His Imperial Malesty becomes impressed with the desirability of lending an ear to the British and Austrian demand, the Conference will probably meet, and war may be averted. statement that the Russians wish to em bark homeward at Bolukders, but that the Porte is understood as objecting to 11 A.M., when the Post Office Closes the proceeding, is a rather curious one. THE demolition of foreign houses and the Does it mean that the Russians are contemplating the withdrawal of their forces from Turkey, or that they merely desire to send their sick homewards by this convenient route? One of the fresh conditions of peace sent by telegraph to the Indian papers and apparently not subsequently contradicted, was that a Russian little doubt that any peace conditions that have been concluded up to the present between the two powers will include ish territory for a time by a Russian for him elsewhere. force as a guarantee for the performance of the conditions, but this force, for reasons of economy, is not likely to exceed 50,000 or 60,000 men. If also the "treaty of peace ratifications have been exchanged," as Reuter telegraphed on the 17th, the Russian troops, with the exception of the specified army of occupation, would be expected by the Turks to commence their retirement from the country. On the whole it is quite possible that the movement of the main portion of the Russian army from Turkey is contemplated in spite of yesterday's telegram reporting the arrival of 25,000 Russian troops at Tchataldja, which, by the way, is within an easy distance of Bojukdere, where the Russians desire to embark. Would, however, Russia withdraw her troops from Turkey at the present critical juncture? It might be they would be safer in Russia than in Turkey, but the Russians would be assuredly surrendering substantial advantages in withdrawing from the lines at Constantinople, the Balkan passes, and other strategical positions of importance in the country. These fortifications given up, the Russians might find them, in the event of a war with England and Austria, occupied by an enemy who would render their re-occupation by the Czar's forces an exceedingly doubtful operation. Bojukdere is a fortified position on the European bank of the Bosphorus, and about ten miles north of Constantinople. Why the Russians should choose this particular spot for embarkation is easy to divine, excepting that it is the nearest port to their troops in the neighbourhood of Constantinople, which city they are apparently not permitted by their agreement to enter. A paragraph in one of the latest home papers to hand tends to throw some light on this movement of the Russians. "Sanitary reasons will," says the writer, "necessitate the Russian military authorities making the entry of the Russian troops into the Turkish capital one of the conarmy had to march back through the snow over the Balkans, while by far the simplest and most rapid way of perform ing the return journey to Russia would to Odessa. There would be no difficulty in procuring transports, for there is reason to believe that the Turkish ironclad fleet would be placed at the disposal of the Russians." Judging from one paragraph in to-day's telegrams would appear that the British vernment is not inclined to order the withdrawal of the ironclad squadron from Constantinople until affairs assume a more settled aspect. Lying as the wooden and mud habitations of the whole of Constantinople do at the merc the squadron must exercise an immense chances of her becoming pro-Russian, or of the fleet, should such a step be deemed advisable at any moment, while the service the heavy guns of the squadron would be able to render in checking any Russian advance along the narrow neck of land upon Gallipoli, supported as these guns would be by others on the other side of the peninsula, would be incalculable.

Shipping in Port. - China, Oscar Mooyer,

Willie, Peter, E. C. Mutch, Dougland

(From a Correspondent.) The Canton Amateur Society gave its second performance of the season at Concordia Hall last evening to a full and appreciative audience; the entertainment being the "new classical Burlesque of Romulus and Remus," supplemented by several examples of Mr Rennell's incomparable instrumentation upon one of the finest pianos ever brought to China. Whatever a fastidious taste may find amiss in the grotesque incongruities of burlesque in general or in this burlesque of the "classical" in partioular, there can be no legitimate cavil at the choice of the fable of the origin of Rome as the subject of one; nor any but the most ditions of peace. Great numbers of men unqualified praise of the manner of the and horses would be sacrificed if the presentation of this one last night. The good judgment and taste of the Committee of Management was conspicuous in all departments:—the assignment of parts; the be by the sea route from Constantinople costuming; the scenery;—and in the drill of the subordinates the indefatigable tact of the Stage Manager had obviously been exercised. Of the acting we may say briefly that the attitudenizing and gesture were natural and graceful or appropriate to each situation; the principal vocal parts were well sustained, and the fine qualities of the voices of Mr G ... g in the part of Apollo, and Mr C...n in that of Tatius, were much appreciated. The two Gentlemen who nacted the parts of the twins, Mr H ... s and Mr F...n naturally vied with each other in their respective role with great effectiveness of burlesque yet not omitting

"wise saws and modern instances." Of the substance of the dialogue and the superfluity of witty conceits in the sarcastic local allusions and personal hits of the songs, it were a misplaced spirit of cavil that did not acknowledge their affinity to the burlesque character of the play. And speaking of it as a whole we may say that it afforded ample evidence of careful study and not an inconsiderable degree of dramatic skill. The scenery is really classical and reflects so much credit on the artist, Mr Baptista, that he was called before the curtain to receive the plaudits of the audience. Simply as a spectacle the Play is very effective and worthy of more than one repetition; and, without making invidious comparisons, we may be permitted to say merely that those who saw Mr G...g and Mr C...n in Apollo In the House of Commons in reply to a land Tatius last night desire to see and hear them again, while those who were unavoidabiy absent will also have the zest of an agreeable surprise in the admirable presentation of the whole. Nor will the last or a future audience willingly forego the charming strains that flow with such ample volume from under the touch of Mr Rennell, By prior notice in the Hongkong journals an accession to the audience may also be obtained. - March 19th, 1878.

The crowd met with no opposition from the few police who were in Whitehall; and passing the astonished sentry in sleepy Downing Street, they debouched into the quadrangle close under the Premier's dining-room, where the full dress ministerial dinner was on in full swing. The crowd sung snatches of the National Anthem, Rule Britannia, MacGregor's war song-a popular music-hall piece which, though weak in metre, is strong in its language, and declares that "Russia shall not have Constantinople." Oheers were also raised for "Osman Pasha," "Dizzy," and that intangible product of creative genius, "the British Constitution." The Premier and his guests were astounded at all this noise and racket, for if there is one spot in London which is usually more quiet than all others, it is the Foreign Office quadrangle. The Prime Minister and his sixty guests came out upon the balcony, and a pretty spectacle they looked, for the majority had dinner napkins round their heads; and after listening to the cheering they retired, and closed the windows. Miscellaneous.

THE possibility of having to land a naval brigade in the East has drawn the attention of the Admiralty to the equipment of the seamen of the fleet for service of this nature, and it has been decided to provide them with gaiters when employed on shore. A pattern, we are told by the Whitehall Review, has just been approved and sealed, and a contractor has been called upon to forward an estimate of the cost of manufacture of a large number of these necessary articles. Water-bottles and additional rifles have long since been forwarded to the Mediterranean for the service of a possible naval brigade, and now it may be declared that our seamen will be found ready, if required, even to the historical "last gaiter button."

THE CHINESE CONQUEST OF KASHGAR. - The Russian Governor of the Semipalatinek district reports that an immense number of Kashgarian refugees continue to. arrive at the frontier. Two thousand Doungan soldiers arrived in a body, and were disarmed by the Cossacks before being construction of a railway in Formosa, and cination and wish to introduce it into Chau- Sinclair, when the following judgment was the terms of the armistice from the Russian subjects. At the Narinsky Fort on the Kashgarian frontier, the number of fugitives from Chinese vengeance is so great that the Russian authorities are unable to succour them. An appeal has consequently been made to Kulja for sasistance. The five Turkish officers who were sent to Kashgar by the Sultan in Yakoob Bog's time were disarmed on entering Russian territory, and despatched, under escort, to Tokmak, where they will remain until General Kaufmann has decided what to do with them. Among the Mussulman officers who have sought refuge at Semipalatinsk is Mahomed Baba, the Kashgarian Governor of Tourlan, who has asked permission to be allowed to live at Andilan, of which Russian town he is a native, No further intelligence has been received of Bek Kuli-Beg, except that he has been expelled from Yarkund. Elsewhere the towns of Kashgaria have been occupied by the Chinese troops, and terrible massacres are reported to have taken place.
